

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF WISCONSIN

WILLIAM T. ANTEPENKO, JR.,

Plaintiff,

v.

Case No. 17-cv-1356-pp

LISA VAN PAY,

Defendant.

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION
(DKT NO. 28)

On December 12, 2018, the court granted the defendant's motion to dismiss this case and entered judgment. Dkt. Nos. 26, 27. About a week later, the court received from the plaintiff this motion for reconsideration. Dkt. No. 28.

Although the plaintiff does not cite a rule in support of his motion for reconsideration, there are two rules that allow courts to re-visit previous decisions. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 59(e) says that within twenty-eight days of the court entering judgment, a party may file a motion to alter or amend that judgment. Rule 60(b) allows a court to grant relief from a final judgment for a specific set of reasons, within a "reasonable time" after entry of judgment.

The plaintiff filed his motion six days after the court entered judgment, so it was timely under Rule 59(e). "Rule 59(e) allows a court to alter or amend a judgment only if the petitioner can demonstrate a manifest error of law or present newly discovered evidence." Obrieht v. Raemisch, 517 F.3d 489, 494 (7th Cir. 2008) (citing Sigsworth v. City of Aurora, 487 F.3d 506, 511-12 (7th Cir. 2007)). Whether to grant a motion to amend judgment “is entrusted to the sound judgment of the district court.” In re Prince, 85 F.3d 314, 324 (7th Cir. 1996).

The plaintiff’s motion does not describe any new evidence that he has discovered since the court entered the judgment. This means that, under Rule 59(e), he is entitled to relief only if he can demonstrate that the court’s rulings constituted a manifest error of law. A “manifest error of law” “is not demonstrated by the disappointment of the losing party. It is the ‘wholesale disregard, misapplication, or failure to recognize controlling precedent.’” Oto v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 224 F.2d 601, 606 (7th Cir. 2000) (quoting Sedrak v. Callahan, 987 F. Supp. 1063, 1069 (N.D. Ill. 1997)).

The motion repeats the arguments the plaintiff made in his complaint and response to the defendant’s summary judgment motion—he disagrees with the court’s decision that the defendant was acting in compliance with a court order. The plaintiff’s disagreement with the court’s decision is not sufficient to demonstrate a manifest error of law. The court will deny the plaintiff’s motion to the extent that it is a motion to alter or amend the judgment under Rule 59(e).

Rule 60(b) allows a court to relieve a party from a final judgment for the following reasons:

- (1) mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect;
- (2) newly discovered evidence that, with reasonable diligence, could not have been discovered in time to move for a new trial under Rule 59(b);
- (3) fraud . . . , misrepresentation, or misconduct by an opposing party;
- (4) the judgment is void;
- (5) the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged; it is based on an earlier judgment that has been reversed or vacated; or applying it prospectively is no longer equitable; or

(6) any other reason that justifies relief.

Section 60(b)(1) allows a court to remedy its own mistakes. Mendez v. Republic Bank, 725 F.3d 651, 660 (7th Cir. 2013). The plaintiff's motion does not demonstrate that the court made a mistake; it shows only that the plaintiff disagrees with the court's decision. The plaintiff has not presented newly discovered evidence, so Rule 60(b)(2) does not afford him relief. He does not allege that the defendants obtained the judgment by fraud, misrepresentation or misconduct, so he is not entitled to relief under Rule 60(b)(3). The judgment is not void, nor has it been satisfied, so subsections (b)(4) and (b)(5) are not applicable. Finally, subsection (b)(6), the any other reason "catch-all category" is limited to "extraordinary circumstances" Id. at 657 (quoting Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 863-64 (1988)). The plaintiff has not described such extraordinary circumstances. The court will deny the plaintiff's motion for reconsideration to the extent that it is a motion for relief from judgment under Rule 60(b).

The court DENIES the plaintiff's motion for reconsideration. Dkt. No. 28.
